ANFU COUP DELAYED BY FINANCIAL SITUATION

Leaders Fail To Show Bankers Where The Profits Come In

MANY DEFECTIONS

Fighting Possible, But Not Probable, In Near Future

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER
(Our Peking Correspondent)

Peking, May 28.—Will Tuan Chi-jui take the premiership and instal an Anfu government in Peking? If so, why doesn't he do so now? What has arrested the coup that is reported to have been in state of planning, for several weeks now, and certainly the last week?

There are three reasons why Tuan and his Anfu adherents have delayed their coup.

The first is financial. If they attempt to seize the government and really achieve their objects—the removal of their military opponents in the provinces—they must fight. And, while it is easy enough to keep armies without paying them it is something else to get them to fight too. Tuan and his Anfu supporters must, then, have money. So far they have not enough.

WANT BIG SUM BEFORE THEY START

I have been told that Tuan has decided not to move unless he has at least $5,000,000 in silver—probably $10,000,000. There has been much scrambling about to get that sum, but so far it has been unsuccessful.

Lu Tsung-yu, the most brazen of the Japanese agents, has been scurrying about for money. It is reported that he has received tentative promises from the Japanese but they have not yet materialised.

Among the Anfuites there is no dearth of money, but their money is not for use in anything so risky as a fight. The Ministry of Communications, the Anfu Club's treasury, has helped to a considerable degree. Five hundred thousand dollars, I am authentically informed, has been sent to Wu Kuang-hsin, one of the Anfu generals in the Yangtsze region, for use in military movements. Another $20,000 has been given to General Chang Chung-chang, in Hunan, another Anfu military satellite. This, when the government cannot pay its clerks and is on the edge of bankruptcy! That much the Ministry of Communications is doing for the cause, under the ministrations of that patriot, Tseng Yu-chen, the minister. More it could do if it wanted, for it has all the railway receipts at its disposal; but, as one man told me, "That would leave nothing for Tseng and his friends."

It is necessary therefore to get money elsewhere before Tuan can move in safety.

DISLOYALTY AMONG ANFUS IS REPORTED

The second reason for Tuan's hesitancy is one less easy to get corroboration for. I am informed that Little Hsu, whose army must be the backbone of any effort by Tuan and the Antuites, is a bit uncertain of the loyalty of his forces. It is said he has given them orders and they have refused obedience.

It must be remembered that Little Hsu recruited his forces originally from the Manchurian bandits. The higher officers were his own men, of course, but the rank and file and the lower officers are almost all ex-bandits. And the bandit chief of Manchuria once was Chang Tso-lin, now Tuchun at Mukden and Little Hsu's bitter enemy.

I am told that Chang Tso-lin has been spreading orders among many of Little Hsu's units that they are not to fight for him. And they are putting their loyalty to their old bandit chief above their loyalty to their mere military employer. In the meantime Little Hsu has to proceed warily.

While I cannot confirm this report the probabilities are all in its favor. Disloyalty of troops to their commanders is no new phenomenon in Chinese military organisation. It explains the inactivity of many of the present military chieftains. It explains

FIVE CARLOADS OF MUNITIONS LEAVE FOR PEKING TODAY

Local Arsenal Ordered To Ship 3,600 Cases War Material To North

SUPPLY INCLUDES 12 GUNS

Hengyang Is Threatened By Southern Forces In Three Directions

Five car loads of guns and munitions will leave the Lunghua Arsenal this morning and be shipped to Peking to be used in Hunan, in accordance with instructions from the Central Government. The different kinds of weapons will be packed in over 3,600 cases. The supply will consist of 12 rapid firing field guns and a large quantity of shells and shrapnel. The cars will be attached to the morning train today and taken to the Capital by way of Nanking.

A telegram to the Central Government from Tuchun Chang Ching-yao under date of May 27 stated that the Southern forces are advancing on Hengyang in three directions. The vanguards are only 20 li from the city. He urgently asked that a large quantity of munitions be sent to the front at once.

SOUTHERN ATTACKING

After the capture of the four Hunan cities, Pao-shing, Leiyang, Kelyang and Anjeng, the Southern troops are now heavily bombarding Yuhsien and Tuling.

In reply to the complaint of the Peking administration, General Tsen Chun-hsuan telegraphed that the Hunan crisis was precipitated by General Chang Ching-yao, who fired the first shot in the engagement near Paoching. Admiral Sah Cheng-ping has ordered Chang to be on the defensive.

The Anfu crowd met at the home of Mr. Tseng Yu-tsing, Minister of Communications, and decided to order General Wu Kwan-hsin to march against the Southern forces. Because of his recent experience with General Chao Ti in Honan, however, General Wu is most reluctant to accept the command.

General Wu Pei-fu, on whom hinges the whole situation, passed through Changsha Saturday, the Tuchun made elaborate plans to give him an enthusiastic reception, but Wu proceeded to Yochow without even seeing him.

Belgian Papers Approve Break With Holland

(Reuter's Service)

Brussels, May 27.—The newspapers generally approve the Government's action in breaking off the negotiations with Holland for a revision of the 1839 treaty, on account of Holland's demand for sovereignty over the Wielingen channel commanding the approaches to the Belgian base of Zeebrugge. (The Government's policy was explained by the Minister for Foreign Affairs in the Chamber yesterday).

The press expresses the view "that the Allies cannot fail to realise," as one journal puts it, that Dutch policy aims at dominating Belgium." Nevertheless a bellicose attitude towards Holland is strongly deprecated.

PROLETARIAT AS BAD AS CAPITAL, ASSERTS ORATOR

Tyranny Of Workers Equal To That Of Former Days Is Pott's Opinion

MEMORIAL DAY ADDRESS

Soldiers, Sailors And Many Civilians Pay Tribute To Glorious Dead

With the pendulum swinging from idealism to materialism, the proletariat seemingly as selfish and tyrannical as the capitalistic class was in its worst days, and a mad delirium of excitement and pleasure-seeking sweeping the world, this is a time to turn to calm reflection on the heroic deeds of the victims of the Civil War.

Thus counseled Rev. F. L. Hawks Pott, president of St. John's University, in the principal address at the Decoration Day ceremonies held under the auspices of the B. P. O. Elks at Bubbling Well Cemetery on Sunday morning.

Major S. A. Ransom, the American Company, S. V. C., a detachment of sailors from the United States warships in port and several hundred civilians assembled at the Cemetery at 8:30 o'clock in the morning and participated in the ceremonies.

Mr. E. S. Cunningham, American consul-general, officiated as Master of Ceremonies. Rev. E. C. Lobenstine offered prayer and Dr F. L. Hawks Pott delivered an oration. When Dr. Pott announced that a monument is to be erected in Shanghai "To Our Glorious Dead" in memory of those who fell in the Great War. the Municipal Band played "America."

Following the pronouncement of the benediction by Rev. Cameron F. McRae, the American Company fired three volleys over the graves of the veterans and "Taps" was blown by the company's bugler.

In his oration Dr. Hawks Pott said:

DR. HAWKS POTT'S SPEECH

"A monument is to be erected in Shanghai in memory of those who fell in the great war. On it the inscription will be: 'To the glorious dead.' It is difficult to conceive of one more striking or more appropriate.

"As we meet here on our Memorial Day, we think of those who died in the service of their country, whether on the battle fields or in the ordinary course of duty, as our glorious dead. We came not to mourn nor lament for them, but to give some expression to our feelings of reverence and gratitude. We do not think that their lives were wasted, and we know that they gave them up without vain regrets. The influence of their lives will live after them, for their works do follow them.

"You may recall the quaint epitaph of Benjamin Franklin written by himself: 'The body of Benjamin Franklin, printer, (like the cover of an old book, its contents torn out and stripped of its lettering and gilding) lies here, food for worms. Yet the work itself shall not be lost, for it will (as he believed) appear once more in a new and more beautiful edition corrected and amended by the author.' We believe that he lives of our glorious dead will reach

TWO ITALIAN AIRMEN END HISTORICAL TOKIO TRIP

Ferrarin And Masiero Both Reach Goal At Japanese Capital

SET NEW RECORD

Under 100 Flying Hours Consumed In Trip Of 18,000 Kilometers

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Osaka, May 31.—The Italian airmen left for Tokio at ten o'clock this morning.

Tokio, May 31.—Lieutenant Masiero arrived here at 1:20 this afternoon.

Lieutenant Ferrarin arrived here at 2:30 this afternoon.

Although the last to join the historical flight, Lieuts. Ferrarin and Masiero are the first to complete the distance. Inseparable in the great world conflict, they have been practically inseparable throughout the journey.

The two airmen left Rome on February 26 at 48 hours notice. They had just been in Paris on a government mission and were requested upon their return to start on the long trip in place of two others. They did not even have time to see their families before leaving, but merely telegraphed that they were going to Tokio by air.

From Rome to Adalia, the two aviators flew together. The journey was uneventful, although between Salonika and Smyrna, the physical difficulties were tremendous.

Impatient to reach his goal, Lieutenant Ferrarin flew ahead. Between Aleppo and Hagdad, he was fired on by Arabs with machine guns. On arriving at Bagdad, the flier reported the incident to the authorities, who immediately bombed the assailants.

TWO HARD STAGES

Between Bunder-Abbas and Karachi and between Rangoon and Bangkok, the airmen found the two hardest stages of their flight. The first was over precipitous mountains, while the other was through dense tropical mist.

Lieut. Masiero accomplished the Bunder-Abbas-Karachi stage in a single flight, but Lieut. Ferrarin was forced to land after passing Chaubar, owing to engine trouble. In spite of the fact that he had been given a document by the British Consul at Bunder Abbas, signed by the local chieftain, Lieut. Ferrarin was surrounded by a gang of Baluchis upon his landing in the vicinity of Chauber. He presented his passport, but the native ignored it. He and his mechanic, Capannini, were arrested and locked up in a cell for two hours. Upon his undertaking to dance round his aeroplane, the two were released to carry out their promises.

The dance was performed as the native musician beat a tom-tom and others drummed on the wings of the aeroplane to the pleasure of numerous squatting figures. The performance was considered satisfactory and the airmen were allowed to give an exhibition with their machine Lieut. Ferrarin went up, looped the loop and headed his airplane straight to Karachi.

FLIERS MEET AGAIN

At Karachi, the two fliers met again and flew together as far as Rangoon. At Delhi, they landed in full moonlight when they were least expected by the local authorities. The engine of Lieut. Ferrarin's machine needed repairs at Rangoon, lasting 20 days. Lieut. Masiero left immediately for Bangkok, where he arrived on

Major McBain Flies Over Shanghai In Private Plane

Veteran British Ace Is First Resident Airman To Circle Over Port In Own Machine

The first privately owned airplane in China went up Sunday when Major W. R. McBain, veteran Ace of the British Air Force, circled over the port in an Armstrong Whitworth machine. He remained in the air for three-quarters of an hour and carried his own mechanic.

Major McBain's machine was shipped to Shanghai from England over a month ago but owing to delays in assembling the flyer was not able to go up until Sunday afternoon.

Shortly after 6 o'clock, Major McBain took off gracefully at his private landing place on Hungjao Road, Siccawei, to the great delight of his friends who went out to watch him perform. After attaining a great altitude, he headed his way towards the Settlement and completed a circle over it. Returning at about 7 o'clock, he made a perfect landing.

The aviator will probably fly again next Sunday. He will take one of his friends as a passenger.

The machine which the major uses is of 160 horse power and is capable of carrying three persons. The flyer expressed his satisfaction with the machine although he said he had not yet become accustomed to heavy machines. During the war, the airplane which Major McBain generally piloted was a single seater carrying two machine guns and of a very high horse power. Major McBain has 13 enemy planes to his credit.

WALES GIVEN BIG RECEPTION IN MELBOURNE

British Prince, Acclaimed By Populace, Lauds Australian Heroes

(Reuter's Service)

Melbourne, May 28.—The Prince of Wales is being kept busy with a continuous round of receptions.

His Royal Highness yesterday held a largely attended levee, at which he decorated a considerable number of ex-service men. Afterwards he received addresses from the House of Representatives and the Senate, and in the evening attended a Commonwealth Government dinner at Parliament House, at which Mr. F. G. Tudor, leader of the Labor party, supported the Prime Minister of Australia, Mr. W. M. Hughes, in proposing the Prince's health.

His Royal Highness, replying, eulogised Australia's services in the war, and also the forethought and enterprise of the Australian nation in providing their own fleet. The enthusiasm which reigned at the dinner was reflected by the crowds outside the building, every avenue of approach to which was blocked by throngs of the Prince's admirers for hours.

H. R. H. REVIEWS FLEET

Melbourne, May 26.—The Prince of Wales, immediately on landing here today, re-embarked on the steamer Hygeia and was conveyed through the lines of Australian warships, who fired a salute as he passed, and masses of other sea-craft, to the suburb of St. Kilda where he made a second landing.

His Royal Highness was received by the Governor-General and the Premier. A brilliant assemblage was present at the quay.

The Prince received a great ovation from the crowds lining the road, from the quay to Government House, a distance of eight miles. An address of welcome was presented to the Prince on the way. The day's program closed with a reception at Government House.

OBREGON ASKS DEATH INQUIRY ON CARRANZA

Mystery Still Shrouds Killing Of Former Mexican President

(Reuter's Service)

Mexico City, May 27.—General Obregon has asked four newspapers to appoint reporters to form a commission of inquiry into the death of General Carranza.

GUARDS SUSPECTED

New York, May 28.—Accounts of General Carranza's death, received from Mexico City are conflicting.

One version is that he was treacherously murdered by a small detachment of General Mariel's troops under General Rodolfo Herrera, who had been told off to protect General Carranza. According to this account, the circumstances point to the murder having been an act of revenge.

It is stated that General Herrera's father had been shot some days previously by General Carranza's orders. General Herrera is reported to be in hiding in the mountains. The Revolutionary headquarters have sent a column to capture him.

SUICIDE, IS CLAIM

A later account asserts that General Carranza, committed suicide, rather than be captured.

The scene of General Carranza's death was the town of Tlaxaltenango, in the State of Pebla, where he was passing the night of May 21 on his flight through the mountains.

General Carranza was accompanied by 40 officers of high rank.

General Adolfo de la Huerta, who has been elected Provisional President, assumes office on June 1.

Advices from El Paso state that General Villa, who is defying the new Government, has been declared an outlaw and a price of 100,000 pesos has been set on his head. He is stated to be with a small force between Parral and Jimenez.

Servia And Rumania Join Italy In Plea For Consideration

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, May 29.—In the course of his speech in the Chamber of Deputies last night on the results of the Hythe conference, M. Millerand, the Premier, said that the Allies were agreed that if Germany delayed any longer in carrying out her obligations, further districts of Germany would have to be occupied.

FRANCE DEMANDS FIXING OF DEBT

Paris, May 28.—In the debate on the interpellation on the Hythe conference in the Chamber of Deputies today, M. Millerand, the Premier, replying to criticisms particularly with regard to the question of reparations, defended, on the ground of its economic advantages, the fixing of the reparations debt now instead of waiting until 12 months hence, as the treaty enabled the Allies to do.

M. Millerand said that it was estimated that the reparations to France would total two hundred and five thousand million francs, which was equivalent to seventy thousand million gold marks.

With regard to the question of priority, M. Millerand mentioned a plan whereby the Allies might obtain effective realisations, in the shape of a capital or realising indemnity, by an international loan or series of loans under combined Allied control. Another method was prolonged waiting for payment of annual instalments by Germany, but this, the Premier considered, was impossible.

In conclusion, M. Millerand reiterated his desire to follow a policy of agreement with Germany but Germany must justify herself by deeds and realise her responsibilities.

A vote of confidence in the Government was put and carried by 535 votes to 68.

ASK SAME RIGHTS ON WAR BILLS

London, May 27.—The Evening Standard states that Italy, whose war debt to Great Britain amounts to £47,000,000, Servia and Rumania have asked to be put on a similar footing to France and Belgium with regard to repayment.

Washington, May 28.—Senator Hitchcock, the Administration leader in the Peace Treaty Fight, does not expect support for President Wilson's request that the United States should assume the mandate for Armenia.

Senator Williams is reported to be the only Democratic member of the Foreign Relations Committee in favor of the mandate.

Action by the Committee will be postponed in order to take the advice of Mr. Colby, the Secretary of State, who is unable owing to pressure of official business to meet the Committee at present.

CANADA WANTS BIG INDEMNITY

Ottawa, May 27.—Canada claims an indemnity of $1,871,000,000 from Germany, including $85,000,000 for separation allowances, $32,000,000 for the Halifax explosion, and $31,000,000 for losses from illegal warfare.

See Who's Here! Bud Fisher Has Put Two Candidates In Presidential Race

Champ Clark Supporters Refuse To Have Dawg Kicked Aroun'

The stuff's off!

The Dark Horse has entered the arena.

He's out for president but he's confronted by a formidable second choice.

Bud Fisher is responsible. He shouldn't have made Little Jeff so popular with the world's news reading public.

There you have it. "Jeff" for president and "Mutt" as his runner-up. "Jiggs" signed the ballot and gave his address as "Maggie's Home." He added that he was a prohibitionist.

Champ Clark leaped into the limelight once more yesterday and, despite his avowal that he would not be a candidate for the office of chief executive, the Missourians in Shanghai rallied and sang the war ballad about "Kickin' My Dawg Aroun'." As a result the veteran statesman was given 14 votes as first choice, with eight supporting ones as second, all cast by persons who had no option and insisted that first and second choice were one.

The day's score shows:

	New Votes	Total
Hoover	7	95
Wood	6	67
Johnson	3	52
McAdoo	2	14
Clarke	14	14
Hughes	0	7

Interest of the fair voters continues to increase. But the ladies are not to be allowed to dominate the polls if the men at Nanhsuchou, Anhuei, have their way. Witness this letter:

"Herewith are enclosed two votes for Hoover. Our crowd here can't vote fast enough or often enough for Hoover. There are two votes to follow from the ladies here, as soon as the next ballots arrive in your two next issues. We agree to women having the ballot, but we didn't agree to their getting it first."

Arkell & Douglas Get Decision In Nail Case

Judge Charles S. Lobingier of the United States Court for China has handed down his decision in the case of Shih Sae Chang and Co. vs. Arkell and Douglas Inc., wherein the plaintiff sued Arkell and Douglas Co. for the return of the purchase money for nails amounting to Tls. 5,464.13.

The plaintiff claimed that the nails ordered under a contract dated June 26, 1918, were not in accordance with the specifications. The plaintiff called evidence to prove that the nails had been inspected by its manager at Pootung and that they were not in accordance with the specifications.

The defendant called evidence to show that the nails had never been in Pootung but had arrived at a wharf in Hongkew and had been there ever since.

Evidence was also called to prove that the plaintiff had agreed to have the nails surveyed by a marine surveyor and that his decision should be final.

The surveyor testified that he had examined the nails in accordance with the request of the parties and that the same were substantially in accordance with the specifications in the contract. The court after hearing the evidence dismissed the case.

Shin Sae Chang and Co. were represented by Mr. Earl B. Rose, of Jernigan, Fessenden and Rose, and Arkell and Douglas Inc. were represented by R. T. Bryan, Jr. of the firm of Fleming, Davies and Bryan.

POINCARE SAYS ALLIES ARE WEAK

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, May 29.—M. Raymond Poincare in an article in the Revue des Deux Mondes, explaining his resignation of the chairmanship of the Reparations Commission, says he thinks the Allies are gradually slipping towards a revision of the Treaty of Versailles.

"Some Allied Governments," he writes, "prefer to act alone in the matter of reparations, while Mr. Lloyd George, although protesting against revision, allows Germany, to nibble daily at a new piece of the Treaty."

M. Poincare denounces the expression "Germany's capacity to pay." He fears that the Allies may ultimately sell their rights for a mess of pottage.

A number of machines are now in course of shipment to Canada for this special work, while others are being sent to India. They are designed for both cargo and passengers and fitted with interchangeable land-carriage and floats.

'Free Corps' Now Menace Germany

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, May 28.—Herr Weissmann, Commissioner of Public Order, has issued a statement that the danger of a rising from Right and Left is serious but not acute.

The Communist Labor party, he declares, have few followers, who can be easily suppressed. The main danger lies with the so-called "Free Corps" and similar military formations, composed of malcontents.

Berlin, May 29.—Uneasiness prevails in this city. An upheaval similar to that of last March is feared. According to Vorwaerts, information from different parts of the country indicates an extensive plot to interfere with the elections.

their full consummation in a world that lies beyond our ken.

"It is for us then, today, to consider once more our debt of gratitude to them and how we may, in some measure, repay it.

ENNOBLED HUMAN NATURE

"In the first place we are indebted to them because they have ennobled our conception of human nature. At times human nature appears to us to be ignoble and not far removed from that of the beast. In the course of the war we saw men capable of cruelty and wickedness which we had thought impossible. But we also saw men rising to nobility by vicarious sacrifice in which we had begun to disbelieve. In its depths and in its heights human nature has opened unforseen ranges. The acts of heroism of men in all ranks of the service were innumerable. Here and there a startling deed stands out, but it is typical of many unseen and known only to God. The world is made richer by heroism. We must now place a new value on human nature. For this we owe a lasting debt of gratitude to our glorious dead. Again, we owe them gratitude because they fought for great ideals, liberty, justice, equality, to make the world safe for democracy, a war to end war, to show that might does not make right—these were some of their ideals. Perhaps many could not formulate them very distinctly, but whether they could express them or not, they felt they were fighting for the sake of man and for the future of humanity, that the human race might rise to a higher plane; that man should not be enslaved by tyranny and welded into a great mass controlled by a few, but that each individual should be a free man on God's free earth, with the opportunity of developing all his powers and capacities.

"Once more we are their debtors because through their sacrifice they helped to usher in a new world.

REASON BECOMES GUIDE

"Four hundred years ago there was that great movement which we called the Renaissance and the western world passed from the medieval to the modern age. It was a period of revolt against authority and tradition—the freeing of the human mind from its fetters. Reason became the guide of life and that political, social scientific and industrial advance and development began which has produced our modern civilisation. No less truly with the great war we came to another turning point in the world's history. We know that the world can never be what it was before 1914. The chapter has been closed with such finality that we are all conscious that a new era is about to begin. If the Central Powers had won the war, this would not have been so. If autocracy had been triumphant, the government of the people, by the people and for the people, might have perished from the earth. To those of the armies of the Allied nations who fought and gave their lives, and to our men who threw in their strength at the critical moment of the conflict, we owe it that a new and better world was to arise out of the ashes of the old.

"These are some of the reasons, then, for our gratitude. They have ennobled our conception of human nature, they have fought for great ideals, they have helped usher in a new world.

"So we come to the consideration of how in some slight measure we may repay our debt. Unless we are willing to make that payment, we may lose the fruits of their great sacrifice.

PROLETARIAT TYRANNY

"As we look out on the world today, there is not much to inspire us with hope and enthusiasm, and it is easy to give way to pessimistic forebodings. There is a great reaction from the high idealism to which we have been transported—the pendulum is swinging from idealism towards materialism. Many are only too eager to get what profit and material benefit they can from the war. Nations and individuals alike are greedy and actuated by self-interest. Men are saying to themselves "let us get while the getting is still good." Under the old regime, the capitalistic class failed to realise the needs of the laboring class. Now the proletariat is coming to its own, but from present appearances it seems to be as selfish and tyrannical as the capitalist class was in its worst days. The end in view is for the "have nots" to dispossess the "haves."

"Furthermore, there has been the wild rush for pleasure. The war brought with it may deprivations and the curtailment of physical comfort and enjoyment. Now that the strain is over, some are inclined to throw aside all restraint and to plunge into a mad delirium of excitement. On all sides there is political, social, and industrial unrest leading some to confess utter and entire disappointment as to the outcome of the war. Others are cynical and openly deride the idea of the possibility of a League of Nations and think that the age of peace is as remote as it ever was.

DUTY IS CLEAR

"If we are going to repay our debt of gratitude our duty is clear. We cannot give way to gloomy anticipation, but we must put forth our strength and strive for the realisation of the ideals for which the war was fought and for which our men offered the supreme sacrifice.

"There is undying truth in the great ideals of the French Revolution—liberty, equality, fraternity. We have made some advances in making men free and in removing legal restrictions and equalising economic opportunities, but we have lagged behind in promoting the spirit of fraternity. Now that the red peril is menacing us, we are tempted to resort to Bourbonism to put down Bolshevism.

"There is panic in America and the great ideal of fraternity becomes obscured.

"In Russia the Bolshevik rule by force and murder, but in America we trust to free discussion, enlightened public opinion and the deliberate vote of the majority. We must be ready to put down sedition, but we need not stifle free thought and inquiry and deport ark-loads of alien revolutionists without even giving them a chance of fair trial.

"This is not the way to fight Bolshevism. We must be true to our ideal of fraternity; we must aim at removing all causes for discontent and every trace of injustice. No doubt, our system of constitutional democracy needs constant adjustment to its environment. There must be better and juster methods of taxation; the power of wealth must be curbed; property must be equally distributed; equalisation of opportunity must become a fact and not a shibboleth, education must be extended to the rural districts as well as to the towns; the government must cease to be a reckless strife of parties and must be conducted on intelligent and businesslike methods; pauperism and destitution must be eliminated. By carrying out such reforms, we will promote the spirit of brotherhood among our people and will help in its spread throughout the world. It is said that we must make the world safe for democracy—we must also make democracy safe for the world and see that it does not degenerate into Bolshevism. The true spirit of brotherhood alone can save our people from worshipping the false Gods of Communism, Bolshevism and Sovietism.

INTERNATIONALISM NEEDED

"Again we must promote the spirit of internationalism throughout the world. In the reorganisation of international regulations the choice lies between two alternatives. We must either adopt the old "greed and grab" policy or else one actuated by an entirely different spirit. We are familiar with the old policy. It was based on the idea of temporary and occasional alliances to maintain the balance of power. These alliances sought only for the interests of their own members and paid no regard to the welfare of the nations as a whole. One nation, or one group of nations desired to subjugate and dominate the whole world. Such was the policy of ancient Rome and such was the policy of modern Germany. That sort of relationship between the nations collapsed with the Great War. We had vainly hoped that in spite of the political ambitions of the nations, international trade would have been a sufficient force to maintain the peace of the world. Kipling somewhere compares the ships engaged in international trade to the flying shuttle of the loom weaving the warp and woof together and producing international brotherhood. We have discovered, alas! that commercial jealousies have become one of the most potent causes of war. The commercial rivalry of Rome and Carthage lead to the Punic wars and the annihilation of Carthage. One of Germany's objects was to establish commercial, as well as political and military domination.

The old system of international relations then, has broken down and we must turn to the other alternative. We must ask ourselves what can restore order out of confusion and promote the peace of the world. Austria-Hungary, Russia and Turkey are disintegrating before our eyes. A multitude of new nations have come into being. The causes of friction existing at present are innumerable.

SITUATION IN ORIENT

"If oriental countries adopt the Germanic policy so consonant to the spirit of absolutism by which these races have been governed in the past, there will be another cataclysm. The only policy that seems at all practicable is a federation of nations for the mutual benefit of all and the question of prime importance for us is: Shall America stand in isolation and adopt the hermit-like policy of separating herself entirely from the affairs of Europe? We found that we were involved in the Great War. Is there any reason to believe that we shall not be equally involved in future wars? There must be a voluntary union of free, independent, democratic states and America should help to bring it about. Unless something of that sort takes place, future wars are inevitable. It would be out of place here to enter into the discussion of the constitution of the present League of Nations and to point out its defects. Most of us believe that article ten could only be adopted by our country with several reservations. The point that I would emphasise is this: the hope of the peace of the world lies in the federation of nations and that America must stand firmly for that ideal. I am not so optimistic as to believe that war can be eliminated entirely from the world. As long as there are wolves the sheep are not safe, as long as there are predatory nations which still adhere to the policy of "greed and grab" national defense and preparedness will be necessary. But it stands to reason that the cause of friction can be enormously reduced if there is a federation of the nations so that there can be arbitration in regard to disputes before there is a resort to the awful arbitrament of war. America has always stood for the principle of arbitration and she cannot stand aloof from this movement for federation without stultifying herself and being false to her own highest ideals.

LIFE THROUGH SACRIFICE

"Lastly we must follow the ideal of our glorious dead who have shown us that life comes through sacrifice. These men entered into the meaning of vicarious sacrifice and they understood why the cross is the symbol of the Christian faith. Paradoxical as it may seem, the peace and the welfare of humanity will not come from the spirit of selfishness but from the spirit of sacrifice. Some of you men on service, you serve—you know that you only help your country by serving it and sacrificing yourselves for it. The idea of service must be broadened and expanded until it includes the whole of humanity, for we can only uplift humanity by service and sacrifice in its behalf.

"This year, on September 6, we celebrate the tercentenary of the landing of the Mayflower. The pilgrim fathers were seekers of liberty—political and religious liberty—and they were ready to make the necessary sacrifice in order that they might obtain it. They went forth into a wilderness, but they won a new world and laid the foundation of the Great Republic. The same spirit actuated our glorious dead and they have gained for us, we believe, the possibility of a better and higher humanity. So, then, if we would repay, in some measure, the debt we owe them, it will not be by the erection of monuments to their memory or by the decoration of their graves, but by being true to their ideals and following the gleam which they followed. We stand today like men who have been engaged in a coasting trade, now setting forth on a voyage over an uncharted sea. We hear, do we not, the voice of our glorious dead calling out to us:

"O young mariner
Down to the haven
Call your companions
Launch your vessel
And crowd your canvas
And ere it vanishes
Over the margin
After it, follow it,
Follow the Gleam."

HARBIN BOARD FILES REPORT ON ITS WORK

Describes Activities And Tells Of Difficulties To Be Overcome

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Harbin, May 29.—The Conference of Professional Unions and Political and Social Organisations at Harbin has furnished the Provisional Government at Vladivostok with a detailed report of its activities during the last few months.

The report states: "The members of the Conference at first believed that its existence was provisional, and that it would be replaced by an organisation appointed by the Government, but, owing to the complicated political situation and the impossibility of official activity before China recognises the Government, the Conference has been forced to carry on, pending further development.

MANY PROBLEMS AHEAD

"The work of the Conference has been very difficult, owing to the continual necessity for preventing the population infringing China's soverign rights. The Conference, however, intends to solve the following problems in the near future:

"(1) To carry out reorganisations affecting the Russian Consul-General at Harbin and the Russian Consul at other towns in the territory of the Chinese Eastern Railway who should respond to requests from Russian citizens that they should fulfil other government functions.

"(2) To reorganise the municipality of Harbin and suburbs on a democratic basis, acceptable to the Government.

"(3) To reorganise the civil department of the railway and hand over its functions to the Russian Consulate.

TO SUPPORT UNIONS

"(4) To support the railway men's professional unions in the task of democratising the railway administration.

"(5) To carry on an energetic propaganda to secure unanimous support for the Provisional Government and to spread the Government's power over the Russian population in this territory."

The Conference states further that it has gained a firm footing in Harbin and established unofficial relations with the Chinese authorities, in the first place through General Djansilin and now through General Udsin, owing to General Djansilin's departure, via Irkutsk, for Moscow, and finally with the Consuls.

ANFU COUP DELAYED BY FINANCIAL SITUATION

partly why Li Hsun, for instance, has been able to do so little.

TUCHUNS GROWING WEARY OF INTRIGUE

This leads to the third reason for Tuan's hesitancy: the opposition of the anti-Anfu Tuchuns. Of these General Chang Tso-lin is the strongest, though the leadership now is being taken by Tsao Kun, Tuchun of Chihli. Chang has been outspoken and blunt in his opposition to Tuan and especially Little Hsu, and is supporting the return to the premiership of Chin Yun-peng.

Tsao Kun has been moving his troops to prepare for emergencies. He is reported to have sent two divisions to Machang already; and Machang is not far from Peking. It is the point from which Tuan Chi-jui started his march against Chang Hsun when Chang was making monarchies in Peking in 1917.

Wu Pei-fu and his powerful forces are steadily coming northward. If it comes to a test of strength the Anfu military leaders have a good fight before them. They can hold Peking perhaps; but possibly not much more. Until some of the non-Anfu generals can be bought over or definite assurances of their neutrality can be given a coup is uncertain.

Wedding

HARRIS-JAMES

The wedding of Captain Ashley Munroe Harris of Stratford, Ontario, Canada, and Miss Mary Gladys James, of San Francisco, was solemnised yesterday morning at St. Joseph's Church. A civil ceremony took place later in the British Consulate-General.

The newly married couple met in Siberia some time ago, while engaged in Red Cross work. Captain Harris only recently returned from Vladivostok, but his bride has been in Shanghai for the last three months, connected with the Standard Oil Company.

Captain Harris is assistant director of personnel in the Siberian Commission, American Red Cross. He is now on his way to Washington, D. C., to assist in the preparation of the final report of the commission to the War Department for funds expended.

During his sojourn here the bridegroom is assisting in the distribution of Red Cross supplies and hospital equipment, forwarded from Siberia to the mission depots in China. Following the termination of his services with the Red Cross Captain Harris expects to return to China and make his home in Shanghai.

Mrs. Harris will accompany her husband to the American Capital.

SHANGHAI WINS FROM NAVY 11-5

Arrangements Going Forward For Series Here With Chicago Varsity

It was the same old story again. Shanghai had on batting togs Sunday afternoon and knocked the stuffing out of the Navy horsehide men. The score was 11 to 5.

The Navy did a little hard hitting on its own hook but its two rallies were checked by poor base running and by the Shanghai pitcher's tightening up in the pinches before any great damage was done. Keaton first man up started the game by busting one of Gill's floaters on the nose for two bags. He went to third on an overthrow and died there, a pop fly and two strikeouts killing any chance of a score.

Keaton repeated himself when he came up in the third inning. He outguessed the pitcher, for instead of getting only a two bagger, this time up he hit a home run. This caused wild rejoicing in the Navy stands as it was the first run scored off Gill this season.

TWO MORE IN 7TH

No further scoring was done until the seventh when a couple of extra base hits and a wild pitch gave the Navy two more. They threatened Tink's hooks again in the ninth when Hopkins walked leading in Swyhart ahead of him, after which "Hoppy" was caught on a fielder's choice.

Shanghai rooters were given a chance to grin when Kollander of the Navy was called out in the ninth after hitting a home run. Eagle Eye Pomeroy whose eagle eye was not hitting on all six Sunday had his attention drawn to the fact that Kollander in his slow sprint around the bags quite ignored first and second bases.

Horrific groans from the tars watching the game greeted this decision which was a perfectly proper one. Mosquito Bills led the Shanghai heavy infantry by punching out three nice hits which he converted into runs with timely help from Crow who was also acting as first assistant to the Foreman Bills of the Shanghai wrecking crew. Tinkham relieved Gill in the sixth with a seven to one lead on the Navy in Shanghai's favor. This was increased four more in the next three innings after which the boys quit work.

COMING GAMES

There will be games Tuesday and Wednesday and all players are urged to come out: The series with Chicago Varsity while not yet confirmed, is all but arranged and it behooves the team to put up a better brand of ball than they have been playing if they expect to get away with the series.

Chicago is a fast, hard hitting team, playing scientific ball, quite different from the easy teams Shanghai has been playing lately. There is no question but that the home team would be snowed under if it played a first class team in its present lack of form. Hard work from now on is the only thing that will help. Too many of the players have been disposed to loaf, figuring that they had their positions safely landed. It would surprise a few if some hard working chaps displaced them.

There is room for a great deal of improvement. The hole at second base must be plugged up. Crow is leaving very shortly, quite a loss to the outfit. There is no certain choice as yet for the position he leaves vacant.

The fans have been inquiring after "Jimmy" Logan, the old umpiring fixture of former years. James has been ill but is improving to such an extent that he is able to sit up and study the new rules for this season. His absence from the diamond has been greatly missed.

ST. JOHN'S WINS FROM S.A.S. TEAM

Annual Baseball Event Is Taken By University By 6-3 Score

The St. John's and American School baseball teams staged their annual contest yesterday and St. John's won 6 to 3. The game was well played though most of the work was done by the pitchers. Tyau for St. John's fanned thirteen of the American boys while Robert Rugh put up a new Shanghai record by fanning nineteen men in eight innings. The St. John's catcher caught a top notch game pegging to bases like a big leaguer.

Meng, the St. John's short stop robbed Squires of a hit by a hair-raising Hans Wagner stab while running into center field. Red Elterich stopped a dangerous batting rally by a fine catch in center field.

The real thrill came for the American boys when a comedy of errors put Douglas Rugh on third and his big brother knocked a ball over the center fielder's head for a home run. Viking was the heavy hitter for the S. A. S. with two clean hits.

The teams were well matched. The game was played with fine sportsmanship on both sides.

Moon's Phases For June

Full Moon	June 2,	1:04 A.M.
Last Quarter	June 10,	2:45 A.M.
New Moon	June 16,	9:27 P.M.
First Quarter	June 23,	2:36 P.M.

The moon is full tonight. How near at hand she seems! We have been talking about the stars, whose light takes hundreds of years to reach us; and there are others thousands and hundreds of thousands of "light years" away. But the light of the moon comes to us in less than one and a half seconds, and the span to the moon is less than the distance of ten times around the earth. There are many people living who have traveled as far as that.

Astronomers know a great deal about the moon, having looked at her with their large telescopes. When the great Hooker telescope of Mount Wilson Observatory, in south California, was first installed last year, after nearly ten years' labor, with a reflecting mirror of more than eight feet in diameter, the largest in the world, the first object which they photographed with the help of that great instrument was the moon; and what a splendid picture it has made! How clearly we can see the wide craters and the high mountains! The photograph is on a scale of fifty miles to the inch, making the total diameter of the moon nearly four feet. Such a picture held sixteen inches from the eye is what the moon would look like 800 miles away. If the actual moon were so near, it would fill the sky from the horizon beyond the zenith, for it would subtend an angle of 106 degrees. The focal length with which the moon is viewed in this telescope is 134 feet, so that with a suitable eyepiece the astronomer sees the moon magnified more than 6,400 times, or as the moon would look thirty-eight miles away. Surely, we can almost shake hands with the people there!

NO LIFE ON THE MOON

It is a well known fact that on the moon everything is dead and cold. There is no perceptible atmosphere even, neither rain, nor dew, nor ice, nor snow. There is no green thing, and no germ or insect life; all is dead and still. We know how life of any sort is dependent on water or moisture. But astronomers have not been able to detect the least bit of water or vapor on the moon: nor have they found such traces as streams of water or clouds of vapor would invariably have left if they had ever been present there. A very elementary study of geology teaches us the importance of the atmosphere and of water in the changes that are constantly going on in the physical conditions of this earth. We see these in the rounded hilltops and the worn out paths of torrents, as well as in the shifting sands and the broken rocks. But none of these results of erosion of any kind can be found on the moon.

Because of the absence of atmosphere on the moon there is no diffusion of light, and out of direct sunlight there is absolute darkness. Even the noonday sky would appear inky black to an observer on the moon, and the stars would be visible by day as well as by night. If only men could live there what a fine station it would be for a telescope, with no trouble from cloudy skies or other impurities of the atmosphere. The most striking object in the moon's sky would be our earth, whose disk would appear thirteen times as large as the full moon does to us. Because of the peculiarity of the moon's rotation, whereby it always keeps the same face towards us, so that we never see her other side, the earth as seen from the moon would be stationary in the heavens, and would be either low down on the horizon or midway or high in the zenith, according to the position of the observer. The shapes of the continents and oceans, mountains and even our cities, would be plainly visible and the earth's rotation could be easily noticed. But the earth's disk would undergo all the phases that we see here in the moon; new, crescent, half and full.

GEOGRAPHY OF THE MOON

But though we cannot go there to see this planet, we can get a remarkably good view of the moon from here. If only we could see Mars with its canals as plainly! Astronomers have made as clear and complete maps of the moon as we have generally of this earth. The mountains and the plains have names attached to them. There are seas also: for at first the dark regions were thought to be bodies of water and these were given fanciful names such as, "Sea of Serenity," "Ocean of Storms," "Sea of Fruitfulness," etc. The brighter parts of the moon are known to be mountainous, for when the sun shines obliquely upon them we can see the distinct shadows cast by the peaks. Some of these mountains are very high, higher even than our Mount Everest; which is the more remarkable when we consider that the moon's diameter is only about one-fourth that of the earth.

The most striking features on the moon are the ring-like objects, known as craters. They are not like ordinary volcanic craters upon earth, being much larger and deeper than anything that we know here. In fact, their origin is now believed to have been, not the upward seething or hurling forth of molten masses from within, but the fall of huge meteoric bodies from the skies, at a time when the moon's surface was as soft as mud. Whatever their origin, they always present a beautiful and interesting spectacle to the eye, even with an opera glass or small telescope. And no wonder, for some of them are more than fifty miles across and more than 10,000 feet deep. More than 30,000 "craters" have been discovered, large and small, of which an opera glass shows us the largest ones. There on the south side of the moon is Tycho, with a diameter of fifty miles, and a basin 17,000 feet deep, having a hill in the center 6,000 feet high. Notice the brilliant rays or streaks that seem to emanate from Tycho, "like pokes from the axle of a wheel." These rays vary in length from a few hundred to over 2,000 miles. They extend in straight lines across vast plains into the deepest craters and over the highest mountains. Just what they are is still a mystery. They are not elevations for they cast no shadows. They cannot be seen at all when the sun shines obliquely upon them, as when the moon is at quarter, but only when the light of the sun shines perpendicularly on the moon's face at about full moon.

On the opposite or northern side is a huge crater, named Plato, about sixty miles in diameter, surrounded by a rampart nearly 4,000 feet high, with individual peaks like towers on the rampart rising 3,000 feet higher. On the floor of this extensive crater there are numerous small craters, which can be seen only with large telescopes. Just south of Plato lies the great crater, Archimedes, fifty miles in diameter, which has no central mount but whose vast smooth interior is divided by bright streaks into seven distinct zones running east and west. Somewhat northeast of the center of the moon's disk is the grandest and best known of all the lunar craters, named after the great astronomer, Copernicus. It has a central mountain with numerous peaks more than 2,000 feet high. At full moon we see streaks of light emanating from Copernicus just as from Tycho.

Have you ever heard a person say on a bright moonlight night: "It is almost as bright as day?" We can easily see how absurd this is, for the moon itself can receive only a small fraction of the sun's light, which streams out lavishly into space equally in all directions; and being far from a perfect mirror it can reflect only a very small part of that which it has received; and of that small part we get only the minutest fraction. The light of the full moon has been carefully measured and it has been found that it would require 600,000 full moons to equal the sun's light. If the whole sky all around, from horizon to zenith, were filled with full moons, even then the light would be only one-sixth as bright and the sun's light. Another way of stating the relation between the moon's light and the sun's light, according to Professor Moulton, is that we receive as much light from the sun in thirteen seconds as from the moon in a whole year. But then, as an Irishman once said, the moon shines at night when it is dark, while the sun always shines in the daytime, when it is already light enough, and we don't need it!

SOME UNSOLVED PROBLEMS

The moon certainly is a useful adjunct or servant to this earth. What a howl of complaint would go up if the moon were to elope with some other planet. Not only should we lose the light of her benign face, but navigation in and out of a thousand harbors would become utterly impossible. The common occurrence of the tides, whereby the water of the bays and rivers near the sea goes back and forth twice each day, is a marvellous attestation of the power of attraction or gravitation, which exerts its influence instantaneously over hundreds of thousands of miles of intervening space. The same power that holds the farthest planet in its orbit, and doubtless wields its sway in some manner to the remote stars, is here exhibited plainly before our eyes every day in the rise and fall of the tides.

Although the moon is so near and we know so much about it, there are mysteries connected with its movements and other unsolved problems pertaining to its origin and history that are as secret and as wonderful as those about the stars. Some of these have been alluded to above, as in the formation of those gigantic craters. We can only refer to certain irregularities of its motion, which to this day completely baffle the exact mathematical calculations of astronomers. All the factors seem to be completely known, yet facts do not conform to theory, and the moon is sometimes ahead of and sometimes behind time, like a badly managed train service. When watching for the total eclipse of the sun in the year 1900, with clocks and chronometers set accurately to the minutest fraction of a second, the moon was actually seven seconds late. In 1918 she was eighteen seconds late, but fortunately astronomers were aware of her tardiness beforehand and made allowance for it. But their knowledge was only empirical, and though years have been spent in the effort to discover the reasons for these discrepancies, and formidable calculations have been made over and over again by the most astute minds, the problem remains unsolved. It is even thought that the fundamental question of gravitation is at stake, and there have been wild rumors that the whole theory of gravitation will presently be overthrown. But I hear the shade of Newton: "We'll let them do some more figuring first!"

A WARNING TO MOTHERS

Never give a baby a sleeping draught, a soothing mixture, or an opiate of any kind whatever, except by the order of a competent doctor who has seen the child. All these things are poison, and they are moreover utterly needless, while the sleep they give is unhealthy, unnatural and injurious.

In Baby's Own Tablets there is not one atom of "sleeping stuff." Yet by their beneficial, healthy action they give refreshing sleep, sleep from which the child awakens bright and well.

Mrs. George Foote, of St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada, writes:—"My baby was troubled with diarrhoea, was very restless and cross, and got but very little sleep. I hardly knew what to do with her. I got a bottle of Baby's Own Tablets and after using them she could sleep well and her bowels became regular. I am much pleased with the Tablets and think them a fine medicine."

Baby's Own Tablets, the Canadian children's remedy, are obtainable from chemists or post free, 60 cents the vial, from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

ENGLAND REFUSES BOLSHEVIK GOLD

British Leaders Will Not Talk With Russ Merchant On The Subject

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 27.—Significance is attached to the arrival in London of M. Krassin, the head of the Russian Trade Delegation, from Copenhagen.

It is suggested that his mission, though primarily concerned with negotiations for the resumption of trade between Great Britain and Russia, may pave the way to peace parleys and that he may be received by Mr. Lloyd George and Lord Curzon.

DECRY MISSION

London, May 28.—M. Krassin, head of the Bolshevik trade delegation, arrived in London yesterday.

It is believed that one of the objects of M. Krassin's mission is to obtain permission to sell captured gold to England.

The Times declares that to permit such a sale would be a condonation of robbery of the French and British creditors of Russia and indirectly equivalent to recognition of the legitimacy of the Soviet Government.

CHRONICLE PROTESTS

London, May 29.—In connection with the visit of M. Krassin head of the Bolshevik trade delegation to London, which has been reported to be in connection with a proposal from the Soviet Government to sell captured gold to England, the Daily Chronicle states that the British Government is not anxious to receive payment in gold for exports to Russia, being only desirous of an exchange of commodities wanted by both sides.

The Daily Chronicle adds:

"Without recognition of the Soviet government, no responsible city institution is prepared to deal in Bolshevik gold. Business men declare that they will act in accordance with the policy of the Allied Governments."

American Banks Equal To Crisis

(Reuter's Service)

Cleveland (Ohio), May 26.—The President of the American Bankers' Association, in the course of a speech here today, said that the banks were well able to carry the industries through the present difficulties.

The United States, he added, will steadily return to normal conditions with deflated prices to create stability.

Ferrarin And Masiero End Historical Flight After Encountering Much Danger

March 30. Lieut. Masiero left Bangkok for Hanoi on April 5 but was forced to descend on account of engine trouble half-way between the two stops.

Lieut. Ferrarin reached Bangkok on April 15 and caught up his companion in Hanoi on April 16.—They both left there for Canton on April 21, Lieut. Masiero arriving at his destination at 1:30 p.m. while Lieut. Ferrarin reached Canton at 9:30 o'clock on the following morning.

The landing place in Canton was a sea of mud and both airmen descended on some property other than the one assigned for the purpose. On April 28, both fliers attempted to start for Foochow. In taking off, Masiero hit a tree, upset his machine and escaped injuries by a miracle. Ferrarin reached Foochow in the evening in the midst of a thick fog. He left Foochow for Shanghai on May 2 at 10 o'clock, arriving here at 1:15 o'clock in the afternoon.

EXHIBITION FLIGHTS HERE

Because of the fact that his machine was beyond repair, Lieut. Masiero came to Shanghai by boat, arriving here on the Africa Maru on May 4. During their sojourn here, both the airmen made several exhibition flights to the delight of the public.

After staying here a week, Lieut. Ferrarin took off at Kiangwan on May 9 and arrived in Tsingtao in the afternoon. Lieut. Masiero resumed his flight from here northward with the S.V.A. machine which was shipped to Shanghai ahead of time for emergency purposes. He started for Tsingtao May 17, the same day Lieut. Ferrarin resumed his journey to Peking, and landed safely in the afternoon. Lieut. Ferrarin arrived in the capital shortly before noon. Two days later Lieut. Masiero also arrived. A rousing welcome was accorded to both fliers, and President Hsu Shih-chang conferred on both the Order of the Wenho when they were received in audience.

On May 23, Lieut. Ferrarin set out again on his flight, leaving Peking at 9 o'clock and arriving at Kowpangtze at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Two hours later, he left for Hsinyuchow, arriving at the latter destination at 6:30 o'clock. Lieut. Masiero again caught up his companion at Hsinyuchow and they left together for Seoul on May 25, reaching their goal about noon.

On May 29, both airmen left Seoul at nine o'clock and arrived in Taiku at 10:30 o'clock. They resumed the flight on the following morning and arrived in Osaka at noon. Yesterday, they set out again from the last stop at 10 o'clock. Lieut. Masiero, who has been disqualified for not using his own machine and for not making the flying trip between Canton to Shanghai, landing at the aerodrome at 1:30 o'clock. An hour later, Lieut. Ferrarin, the first qualified airman engaged in the Rome-Tokio flight made a perfect landing amidst an enthusiastic reception.

Though the journey took 95 days, it was completed in only about 94 flying hours.

Lieut. Ferrarin hails from the Venetian provinces and is 24 years old. He is one of the reconnaissance pilots well-known in Italy for his achievements in the war. He took part in many important expeditions, among which is the raid on Friedrichshafen in Germany to photograph the Zoppelin works. He was with d'Annunzio, when the famous raid on Vienna was conducted.

The pilot underwent numerous engagements with the enemy chasers. Although his machine was not a fighting plane, he downed two of his opponents. He has been decorated twice for his bravery on the field of battle and got his rank for meritorious service.

MASIERO HAS WAR RECORD

Lieut. Masiero also comes from the Venetian province, Padova. He is 26 years old. At the outbreak of the war, he acted as a machine gunner of an airplane. Later he secured the pilot's certificate and was assigned duty on a reconnaissance machine and later on a chaser. His record in the war was most enviable and he has bagged no less than eight enemy planes. He has been awarded many Italian and foreign medals, including the Belgian and Servian Military Crosses.

The Rome-Peking-Tokio Flight was originally planned by Italy's famous poet-aviator-statesman, Gabrielle d'Annunzio, whose literary work has been translated into all civilized languages. His greater glory, however, is that which he gained on the battlefield.

When war broke out, he was the foremost to labor for the marshalling of Italy on the side of her Latin sisters for the defense of the Belgians. He joined up as a private, although he was then 54 years old and was not liable to be called to military duty. He served respectively as an infantryman, a flier and a sailor. As an infantryman, he fought on the Carso. In May, 1917, he went to battle with an Italian flag wrapped round his body and he stuck it in the enemy trenches. For this he was given the Italian golden V. C.

ORGANISER OF FLIGHT

As an aviator, d'Annunzio was the promoter and the first executor of most of the daring enterprises, including the bombing expeditions to the Austrian Naval Bases of Pola and Cattaro, both far away and well-fortified, and the flight over Vienna. He was twice wounded, losing the sight of an eye.

As a sailor, he designed and conducted the raid on the Harbor of Buccari near Fiume. He went there with two small motor boats carrying torpedoes and sank one enemy ship. He has risen, step by step, to the rank of colonel.

The Fiume question, which has not yet found a solution, has prevented the great soldier-poet from participating in the flight. Though directed by Colonel d'Annunzio, the work of preparation was made by Captain Delpiano, who was recently in Shanghai to complete arrangements and Lieut. Bilisco, both of when have taken great pains to ensure its success. The whole length of flight is about 18,000 kilometers or 30,000 Chinese li. It is divided into the following sections:

Rome-Gioia de Colle;
Gioia de Colle-Saloniki;
Saloniki-Adalia;
Adalia-Allepo;
Allepo-Bagdad;
Bagdad-Bassora;
Bassora-Bunder Abbas;

Tsingtao-Peking;
Peking-Hsinyuchow;

DESCRIPTION OF MACHINE

The S. V. A., type of machine used by Lieut. Ferrarin is so called because it is named after Colonels Savoia and Verduzio who designed the machines and after Ansaldo, the factory where the machines are built. The plane is recognised by Italy and abroad as a perfectly built machine. Its characteristics are:

Weight, 730 kilogrammes;
Plane surface, 26.9 square meters;
Speed, 125 kilometers per hour.
One fixed motor, Spa or Isotta, both of Italian make, 220 horse power, 6 cylinders and 1,650 revolutions per minute.

Lieut. Ferrarin's appreciation of Shanghai's rousing welcome:

"I have been received and welcomed elsewhere. But never have I enjoyed so much and been honored so as I have been in Shanghai. Your warm reception touches me. I have done very little and do not deserve such a welcome. I hope that after the completion of my journey, I shall be able to return to Shanghai and make better acquintance with you—one and all."

O'DWYER GETS PRAISE FROM INDIA HEADS

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 26.—The despatch from the Indian Government to Mr. Montagu, the Secretary of State for India, accompanying the report of the Hunter Committee, pays a tribute to Sir Michael O'Dwyer, Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjaub, who had been subjected to great criticism, and also to other officers for their conduct in difficult circumstances.

The despatch concludes with an expression of great regret for the sufferings, resulting from the disturbances, and with a solemn warning to the promoters of civil disobedience, a movement which was calculated to lead to the overthrow of law and order and was the chief cause of the outbreak.

DYER RETIRED

The Indian Government further reported that the Commander-in-Chief in India had directed General Dyer to resign his appointment as Brigadier and had informed him that he would not receive further employment in India.

Mr. Montagu, while recognising General Dyer's honesty of purpose, approved the decision.

PRESS IN AGREEMENT

London, May 27.—The press generally agrees with the main findings of the Hunter Committee but much sympathy is expressed with Brigadier-General Dyer.

The general opinion is that he made an honest mistake, thinking that he was called upon to make such an example at Amritsar as would produce a deep impression throughout the Punjaub.

New Post Toasties represent the most appetizing form in which choice, nutritious Indian corn has ever been prepared.

A new patented process which includes rotary toasting under quick, intense heat gives these flakes a delicious new and distinctive flavour.

The New Toasties are featured by the bubbly appearance of the surface of the flakes—due to this new art of toasting which releases the wonderful new and attractive true corn taste.

New Post Toasties are not "chaffy" in the package; and they don't mush down when milk or cream is added like common "corn flakes."

(5) The Loan will be redeemed at par on June 30, 1950, but may be redeemed by the Council in whole or in part on June 30, 1930, and/or on any subsequent date or dates on which the half-yearly interest is payable, subject to the Council giving six calendar months' notice in the Municipal Gazette and Public Press of Shanghai. In the event of any partial redemption of the loan the numbers of the Debentures to be redeemed will be decided by drawing. The numbers of such drawn Debentures will be notified in the Municipal Gazette and Public Press of Shanghai not less than three months prior to the date of repayment.

Application forms can be obtained on and after May 1, from the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, No. 12 The Bund, or from the Treasurer and Comptroller, Finance Department, 24B Kiangse Road, to whom all enquiries should be addressed.

Important Notice

My late grandfather, Mr. Chuan Sien, (筠仙公) had, in the thirteenth year of Kwang Shu, bought twenty shares of the Chen Chi Woo Insurance Co., (仁濟和保險公司) Nos. 16140/59, with an Interest Book. On the 5th day of 7th moon of the Kee Vee year (巳未), my servant, Yue Tseng Yung, was ordered and brought with him the said share certificates, by traveling in the train from Changsha to Hankow, for drawing interest. While he was at Li-lu in the night, the said certificates were stolen and immediately after the case was reported to the Railway Station for recovery, without trace.

Having requested the Magistrate and Chamber of Commerce jointly the said Insurance Company, Shanghai, was advised of the loss and to issue new Certificates.

I hereby further declare the nullification of the original, both in Chinese and Foreign Newspapers of Shanghai and Hankow.

The Siberian Buffer State

THE objects sought to be attained by the people of Eastern Siberia in forming the so-called buffer state are becoming clearer. It is now certain that the step taken by the Zabaikal government at Verkneudinsk was in accordance with the desires of both the Soviet government and the Zemstvos Government which now makes its headquarters at Vladivostok.

Both governments desire to avoid collisions with the Japanese. They do not wish the Japanese to have any excuse for remaining in Siberia and they believe, if they succeed in preventing such clashes, pressure of public opinion both in Japan and elsewhere will lead to the early withdrawal of the Nipponese.

Since the overthrow of Kolchak in the middle of January there has been a strong tendency on the part of the great majority of the people of Siberia to reunite with Soviet Russia. It may be truthfully stated that there is not a single political party in Siberia that is against the Lenin-Trotsky regime. All of the newly formed governments are acting in accordance with the desires of Moscow. And but for the fact that the Semenoff group at Chita had the support of the Japanese and was able thus to stir up trouble and delay matters, there would be by now complete harmony in Siberia and once more a strongly reunited Russia.

But after the coup tried by Japan on April 4 and 5 it became clear to the Siberians and to the Soviet Government that the interventionists were not through and were taking advantage of every possible opening to dig in more firmly in Siberia.

Then it was that the Soviet Russia and the Siberian democratic governments decided to form the buffer state. And it has since been announced that the economic and social policies will be such as to obviate the possibility of further clashes. The buffer state takes in all the provinces east of Lake Baikal and it is the hope of the Siberians and the Bolsheviki gradually to bring about a situation that makes it impossible for Japan to remain in Russian territory.

Japan's only excuse for being in Siberia now is based on her alleged desire to prevent the spread of Bolshevism towards her shores. The situation brought about by the formation of the buffer state is that there is now no fear of the further advance of the Soviet armies. And it surely is the hope of all people familiar with the situation that Japan will attempt no more coups and will not seek to create new excuses for remaining in a country which does not belong to her and in which she has not a single plausible reason for remaining. Her position there now is that of an invader and it is untenable.

H. G. Wells And The War

BY DOUGLAS GOLDRING
(Young English Novelist)

Among the leaders of Democratic thought in England during the past twenty-five years no individual has been more prominent, more justly acclaimed, than Mr. H. G. Wells. Perhaps no writer, with the possible exception of Bernard Shaw, has exerted a more profound and widespread influence on the minds of the younger generation of English men and women. The debt which all thinking people in this country owe to Mr. Wells is so great that, regardless of his war record, whatever it may be, nobody with a spark of generosity in his composition can fail to acknowledge it with gratitude. But there are dangers in allowing this gratitude to enslave our intelligence. The question must be asked by the international-minded at this juncture whether Mr. Wells is for us or against us. And if he should declare himself on our side, we have to ask ourselves further whether we can trust him any longer.

During the war Mr. Wells occupied a special, an almost unique position. Unlike Mr. Shaw, who has, like the prophets, always made a practice of saying five years in advance what the generality of intelligent people will eventually accept as the truth, Mr. Wells has interpreted the best thought current in England at particular moments in a manner capable of immediate acceptance by large sections of our population. Thus during the past five years he might, in a very intimate sense, have become our national spokesman. He might have crystallised, more effectively even than President Wilson, the vague hopes and desires of decent "plain people." He needed but courage in order to reveal to innumerable simple souls what they really, at the bottom of their hearts, thought and felt. Throughout his career he has been a voluminous publicist. He is a Republican, for a time he was one of the shining lights of the Fabian Society. That conflict between capital and labor, the existence of which the collapse of the enemy has now laid bare even to the densest among us, has occupied his attention for years. And before August, 1914, for at least a decade, young men and women in this country had imbibed from Mr. Wells hatred of war, distrust of that capitalism which is the chief underlying cause of war, distrust of monarchy, imperialism, British educational methods, politcians, and our higher bourgeoisie. No writer had done more than Mr. Wells to encourage the growing tendency toward iconoclasm, toward breaking up as a prelude to rebuilding. The seeds of those new ideas which are now everywhere gaining acceptance, were widely sown by him in pre-war England. His novel "The World Set Free," in which in the spring of 1914 he foretold the World War, must have given the first push to the young men and women who, when the war actually broke out, formed the backbone of the International Socialist party in England. By awakening the consciences of large numbers of his readers on the subject of mutual murder and capitalist exploitation, he did more than any other Englishman to produce that essentially English product, the "Conscientious Objector."

When war broke out, while many of Mr. Wells's disciples were keeping alight the flame of those principles which with such eloquence he had instilled into their minds, Mr. Wells himself, like the majority of us, completely lost his head. At one moment he was urging all the middle-aged gentlemen living in the country to clean their rook-rifles so that, when the Hun invaded, they might lurk behind hedges and bag at least a victim apiece before their women were raped—regardless of the fact that, according to those laws of warfare which we observed so faithfully in South Africa, such a proceeding would have justified the Germans in burning every village they entered. This emotional episode, in giving us the clue to Mr. Wells's character, at the same time makes any bitterness we might be tempted to feel toward him unjustifiable, and it also shows us how completely, as an intellectual leader, he is untrustworthy. For Mr. Wells is a man of genius with a temperament; and allowances must be made for his temperament. He has not, one suspects, the moral intellectual courage of a Bertrand Russell or a Bernard Shaw, because he does not possess their self-control. He is not one whom we could reasonably expect to die like Giordano Bruno, or even to put himself within reach of Dora. His finest qualities are his sensitiveness to ideas, his eager scanning of the future, his belief in and love for humanity, the wide range of his imagination, and his ability—at his best moments—to combine emotional warmth with a scientific clarity. The value of his political writings has lain always in their suggestiveness. He has the knack of starting trains of thought in his readers' minds. What it is that he is suggesting perhaps very often he does not himself realise, and would endeavor to counteract if he did. He does not deliver a gospel; he pours out the raw material for several contradictory gospels. It is for those who read him to select from his work what is of value to them and resolutely to reject the rest.

If the war has not displayed Mr. Wells in the light of a hero, it has at least revealed him as an honest and lovable human being, intensely emotional, compounded of wisdom and folly, of faults and virtues like the rest of us, but with, on the whole, a bias toward such things as are decent, humane, and democratic.

His war books reflected current opinion, but did not form it. "Mr. Britling Sees it Through" was a brilliant exposition of that first awakening from intellectual numbness which took place in England after the first year of the war. The book did not bring about this awakening, it recorded it. It was published at precisely the right moment and was an immense success. "The Soul of a Bishop," which followed it, reflected in an eminently prudent manner that half-wistful re-examination of the Sermon on the Mount which was taking place in the minds of religious people during the period just preceding the Lloyd George-Northcliffe intrigue, when peace was a possibility. The point of the book was so carefully wrapped up that the majority of Mr. Wells's library subscribers and none, apparently, of his reviewers were able to preceive it. But it was there. The book interpreted what was in the minds of a number of inarticulate people whose religious feeling was leading them toward a demand for peace.

With the arrival of Mr. Lloyd George's "knock-out" coalition of politician and pressmen, there came a fresh and more violent inundation of "hate" journalism. The tired passions of the mob were violently whipped up. A return to the War Spirit was preached in the columns of the great newspapers, and the people responded. Victory was in sight! One more effort! Another million men! Even transcendental pacifism now meant danger for a popular author. The award for plain speaking and clear thinking was jail, exile, or, at least, financial loss. And never was there a period when the purveyors of higher thought occupied themselves more desperately with the safety and comfort of the higher thinker.

Mr. Wells might at this time have done something to stop the rot, had he possessed the qualities essential in a leader. Not possessing these qualities, he once again acted as a "reflector." He crystallised the idea of the mob, but he crystallised (and it is due to him to say it) not their worst ideas but their best. How bad these were can be seen by anyone who cares to study "Joan and Peter." Perhaps Mr. Wells himself was uneasy and dissatisfied, because this portentously long and jaded novel marked the lowest intellectual level which he had yet touched. He had fled from the task of educating the people about the one subject which was agitating their minds. The darkness of war brooding over the whole land was only made darker by him. His pages contained no light in the sense in which readers of Henri Barbusse understand that word. "Joan and Peter" merely reflected the misery and bewilderment which afflicted the crowd. Amid the horror and desolation caused by a bankrupt social system, at the end of a world period, when our civilisation seemed to be breaking itself to pieces on the battlefields of Europe, Mr. Wells consecrated his enormous novel to enshrining and amplifying this profound conclusion: "a world whose schools are unreformed is an unreformed world!" Joan and Peter are only typical public-school boy, typical public-school girl. Mr. Wells seems to have discovered the "English gentleman" at the very moment when the more clear-sighted of his compatriots were beginning to find him out. Peter can neither reject nor rebel, and except for the fact that he is a rather more lamentable prig than the average boy unhampered by an Empire-building guardian with a sense of mission, he belongs precisely to the type which the English public schools have for generations turned out in tens of thousands. An England of Peters will remain an unreformed England. Joan is a more likable and slightly less stereotyped figure than Peter, but as a product of educational reform she is pathetic. As the heroine of a feuilleton called "The Soul of a Wack" she would be perfect. One can imagine her (she is a chauffeur in the Wacks) driving General Dyer to his Amritsar battue with ecstasy. One cannot imagine her, in an access of rebellious rage, driving General Dyer into the ditch. But unless educational reform in England is going to turn English boys and girls into rational human beings capable of generous indignation, incapable of mean and sentimental acquiescence, it will not save us, and it will not be reform.

It is a relief to turn from the Mr. Wells of the last stages of the war to another Mr. Wells, the author of passages such as this: "At first I was extraordinarily excited by my baptism of fire. Then as the heat of the day came on I experienced an enormous tedium and discomfort. . . . I kept thinking of the dead Prussian down among the corn and of the bitter outcries of my own man. Damned foolery! It was damned foolery. But who was to blame? How had we got to this? . . .

"'From Holland to the Alps this day,' I thought, 'there must be crouching and lying between half and a million of men, trying to inflict irreparable damage upon one another. The thing is idiotic to the pitch of impossibility. It is a dream. Presently I shall wake up'

"Then the phrase changed itself in my mind. 'Presently mankind will wake up.'

"I lay speculating just how many thousands of men there were among these hundreds of thousands, whose spirits were in rebellion against all these ancinet traditions of flag and empire. Weren't we perhaps already in the throes of the last crisis, in that darkest moment of a nightmare's horror before the sleeper will endure no more of it—and wakes?"

Mr. Wells has been talking to returned soldiers, you think, and I have stolen into his study and transcribed some lines from the manuscript of his forthcoming novel. Not a bit of it. The passage I have quoted was published in the spring of 1914. In the ghastly intervening years many millions of people have "woken up" from their nightmare. The questions postulated by the war have been answered by a great cry of rebellion from millions of human hearts. And Mr. Wells, who had the imagination to foretell both questions and answers, has Mr. Wells gone to sleep? If he has, mindful of his many services to humanity, perhaps the least we can do is to leave him undisturbed. When he wakes again he will see the forces he once led, far in front of him, rushing to attack. And he will have all his work cut out if he wishes to catch them up. If, panting after them, he cries: "Stop! Stop—I am one of your leaders," it is to be hoped that they will not delay their advance to listen. For, unlike the warfare of guns and tanks, the warfare of ideas cannot be conducted from the rear.

Algeciras-In-The-Sun

BY CHARLES TOWER

Fritz is waiting. For a golden opportunity. There are more fortunes to be made in Madrid, the City with a Future, than even during the meteor rise of Berlin. Therefore Fritz is in Madrid.

And there are others waiting in Algeciras, the future bridge-head to the African railway system. Therefore Fritz, several of him, has taken up his abode in an inn opposite the dusty harbor station.

Fourteen years ago the Kaiser's delegates to the Algeciras Conference, having looked hungrily for weeks towards the African headlands opposite, finally informed the spoiled child of Europe that he could not have all he wanted. France and other people had friends as well as rights. Then the Kaiser determined finally upon war.

Now, until she comes again into the political limelight, Algeciras takes a siesta in her wonderful sunshine and fashionable Britain makes rendezvous in the Reina Cristina Hotel, which to my knowledge has no counterpart in Europe and perhaps scarcely any on the habitable globe.

Here in the glorious gardens over the bay, one glow of myriad arums and white iris and roses and flowers I cannot even name, miracle-workers, the people who make the spells, take a rest. It is a country house and a country club together, and it looks across its terraced gardens towards Gibraltar and to the African mainland.

Algeciras is an English discovery, served from Bobadilla junction by an English railway company, and a resting-place of many whose daily round for weeks on end is upon the Rock opposite.

Ronda, of Balcony fame, up in the hills, was perhaps never as good as it used to be. It is Tivoli without its t's—trees, temple, and (alas! now) torrent.

But Algeciras was never so good as it is. At sundown great white birds settle in flocks upon one tall tree in the garden and turn it into a snow-pillar, and at sunrise the faint scent comes up to my bedroom window from an orange tree in fruit and flower, the same that was brought here in fruit overnight to please an English lady who wanted to "wake among oranges."

Along the cliff-edge towards "Sandy Cove," where adorable English children are paddling in the sun, there is a carpet of blue crocus, edged with scarlet vetch and fringed with asphodel, while the flowering broom throws dashes of almost violent gold into the color scheme.

Down by the sleepy port dusty strings of donkeys pick their way over the cobbles (donkeys are dainty steppers), laden and overladen with piles of cork from the forest, while babies of from five to seven tango, and tango well, in the street to the drone of a barrel-organ.

How on earth can they do it in the sun and where do they pick up the steps?

McTYEIRE METHODS

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir: I beg to offer, through your valuable columns my congratulations to the McTyeire Sorority for the success of their recent fete, as a result of which a handsome sum was realised, which the McTyeire School needs for future extension. As one who is deeply interested in the education of the young ladies of China, may I express the following opinion for consideration:

It seems to me that the present problem of the school is how to make girls more useful to their homes and country than just to put up more buildings so as to accommodate more students. To the average foreigner a McTyeire students appears to him as one who can write and speak fairly good English but he does not know that these girls are so sadly deficient in their own national language that practically over ninety percent of the whole school are unable to write a Chinese letter in simple wenli. Because of that, they are forced to write in the vulgar Shanghai colloquial dialect and have to use many funny and self-coined words which are absolutely unintelligible to even the most learned Chinese scholars. The ones who can write English generally communicate with people in English instead of bothering about the Chinese language which, quite often, is practically "Greek" to them.

In the girls schools in America, a course in cooking is generally given so that when a girl begins to manage a home herself she will be able to do her own cooking, or at least, to supervise it efficiently. Following this practice the McTyeire as well as a few other schools, are teaching the girls how to make chocolate caramels, fudge, taffy and a few other niceties which the ordinary Chinese can very well get along without. If the time wasted in these superficial things is spent in teaching the girls how to make a few Chinese dishes, they will be learning something which we may call in this country household science.

A Chinese girl educated in the old-fashioned way is always noted for her work with thread and needle. With the introduction of the so-called modern education in China, the thread and needle have gone out of fashion, and I am afraid that if things continue like this, everything in a Chinese house will have to be done by a tailor in the near future. Given a piece of cloth to be cut into a dress, an old-fashioned educated Chinese girl would do it in a few minutes but how many of the McTyeire girls can do it?

In order to make education mean anything at all to the students, the educators must first study the social and economic conditions of the country in which the school is located. Copy as much as you want the methods of Vassar, Smith, Wellesley, and M't. Holyoke, but remember that the Chinese are Chinese, and being so, their home life, culture, characteristics and social conditions are quite different from the foreign. For a foreigner to run a school in China that can really meet the needs of the Chinese, one must first have a thorough knowledge of these questions. One can do that by extensive traveling throughout the country, mixing with the Chinese people, and visiting their homes frequently; and if one finds that still not enough, I feel sure it will be beneficial to consult a few Chinese on matters regarding the administration and the curriculum of the school. During the next few weeks, I am sure the Chinese in Shanghai will be very useful to the McTyeire School as the "Forward Movement" is just being launched. But, to make them more useful, give them a little voice, or let them have a hand in, the administration of the school.

Whatever may be done, I hope that every future McTyeire graduate with her twelve years of education in the school will at least be able to write a decent letter in Chinese. I enclose herewith my card. Yours faithfully,

M. D.

THOUSAND ISLAND DRESSING

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir: In yesterday's copy of your valuable paper I noticed under the heading of "By Loretto C. Lynch, An Authority on all matters having to do with the home," some salad suggestions and dressings, which are very good, but there is one mistake in the Thousand Island Dressing and I am taking the liberty of calling your attention to same.

The dressing in question was first made at the Waldorf Astoria, New York, with which company I was connected for seven years, and served at the Summer Home of the late George C. Boldt in the Thousand Islands, and was there named "Thousand Island Dressing." It became very popular at the Waldorf Astoria and The Bellevue Stratford in Philadelphia, which belongs to the same company and was finally used in most hotels and restaurants in the States, but I dare say that all of them do not make it alike.

Here is the proper recipe for this dressing:

One teaspoon full of chopped green peppers; one teaspoon full of chopped pimentos; one teaspoon full of chopped beets; one half teaspoon full of chopped chives or green onion tops; one whole grated hard-boiled egg.

Use a large bowl filled with cracked ice, insert a smaller bowl in same. Take one third teaspoon full of dry English mustard; some salt, pepper and paprika, mix with one tablespoon full of terragon vinegar and beat into it slowly six tablespoons full of the best Italian or French oil procurable; add a little more vinegar while mixing, not using more than two tablespoons full in all, add one table spoon of chili sauce and one of catsup and a dash of Worcestershire sauce; then add the rest and you have a perfect Thousand Island Dressing.

To make a Russian dressing omit the oil and vinegar and use a thin Mayonaise instead; in some restaurants a teaspoon full of cavier is added, which gives a very good flavor.

These dressings are mostly used for green salads, but are also good for lobster, crab and shrimp salads. Very truly,

PAUL O. ARNSWALDE,
Manager Carlton Cafe.

The Peregrinations Of Pussyfoot

Probably Mr. Pussyfoot Johnson has not done much in Europe either of good or harm (according to how you view Prohibition), but his campaign has been diverting to a world saddened by four years of successful war and eighteen months of unsuccessful peace, says The Nation, (N.M.). Considering what Europe had already survived, it looked like a safe bet that it would withstand the advance of one man who traveled light, carrying only a pocketful of tracts and a cold-water bottle. One could permit himself, therefore, to view the peregrinations of Pussyfoot less seriously than a Hindenburg drive—to classify them in the amusement column along with Barnum and Bailey's Greatest Show on Earth. But the spectacle has been interrupted, and Spring brings back not only the pussy willows but the pussyfeet.

The visit of the Anti-Saloon League leader to Europe began, as all well-conducted tours should, in England. Pussyfoot vs. the Pub was a true sporting event which all Anglo-Saxondom could and did enjoy, regardless where one's sympathies lay. But when Pussyfoot crossed the Channel to France, abandoning Burton and bitter for Bordeuax rouge and Saumur mousseux, one felt that it was no longer an equal struggle. The Frenchman is a patient listener and a polite host, but whoever tries to interfere with his meal hours or upset his drinking habits is likely to be withered with sarcasm or engulfed by abuse. When you consider, too, that the one most noticeable evidence of our culture abroad is the "American bar," you realise the confusion that Europe must have felt at Pussyfoot's proposal to sell nothing at the Paris cafes but white ribbons. It was puzzling to understand how the American talisman, once a rabbit's foot, had suddenly become a Pussyfoot. Nothing so brash had appeared since the days of Don Quixote as this knight out of the west who would attack single-handed the tradition-buttressed fortresses of Vin Ordinaire and Petit Verre. Better to have tried his lance at Verdun or Pas de Calais. On ne passe pas!

So we were not surprised, after the first alarm of Pussyfoot's arrival in Paris, to see him drop out of the news. We even suspected that some defeatist might have lured him off to the heights of Saint-Cloud or to the Coucou on the Butte Montmartre, and there mellowed man and morals with a bottle of Pommard or Cheateau-Yquem. The French, too, learned propaganda during the war. The next news of Pussyfoot was that he had been invited to conduct a prohibition campaign in Turkey. Now good Mohammedans are teetotalers already (evil-minded persons say that is why the Turk is so unspeakable), and one may assume, therefore, that the campaign is against such liquor traffic as has sprung up to meet a bona fide Christian demand. We think the morals of Turkey should be left alone, if for no other reason than to have some black sheep in the world to keep us Americans looking white. What use to be shipped somewhere east of Suez if Pussyfoot gets there first? What lure will be left in the East if the Prohibitionists corrupt its evil manners?

We are glad there is to be no attempt to jostle the East. "Who goes softly, goes far," says the Italian proverb. Theodore Roosevelt, more impatient, said "Go softly, but carry a big stick." To which Mr. Pussyfoot Johnson holds up a forbidding finger, and offers a further amendment: "Go softly—and carry not even 2.75 percent of stick."

Not Too Optimistic.
One Silly Theory.
If Mars Could Talk.
Ouija 2,000 Years Old.

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

The railroad strike is about settled, perhaps for a few days, perhaps not. To prevent abnormal optimism, the bakers in some big cities say they are planning a little strike, and there are others back of that one.

Parts of Mexico want to secede from the main part. You can hardly blame them. Carranza, for a novelty, asks permission for his fighting troops to march on United States soil.

The silliest of all silly ideas is the effort to solve the high cost of living problem by doing without.

The latest development suggests wearing overalls to cut the cost of clothing. That idea has already doubled the price of overalls, making life dearer for workers that need overalls. Later it may have an effect on the price of ordinary clothing, but the effect will be to raise the price. When you disorganise an industry, cut down employment temporarily, injure the credit of manufacturers and the stability of business, you hurt business, and you will make its product more expensive.

If we should talk to Mars from that balloon, fifty thousand feet up, surprising information might come through. If we asked the Martians, whose civilisation is millions of years older than ours, how to harness the tides, they might answer, "Why, that is archaic. For many ages we have had no tides or oceans, our planet having become absolutely round and our water supply, as you probably know, being kept in canals serve for reservoirs and for transportation.

"Don't waste time harnessing your tides, which will soon pass, as your planet becomes smooth like ours, with no hollow basins for oceans. And don't waste time, as we once did, utilising the electric power in your planet or in the sun's heat. You might as well begin now using the much more convenient concentrated force stored up in atomic construction."

Mars might teach us control of a planet's polar motion, through distribution of heat from the equator to the poles, thus enabling us to control polar ice accumulation, weather, temperature and elimination of glacial periods. Much about man, his destiny, origin and purpose, the Martians might teach us, for they are old. But, fortunately, Mars will not teach us suddenly more than our little minds could well handle.

Men and races grow as they learn, and learning to their minds is like exercise to their bodies. For a planet suddenly to inherit, without effort the accumulated wisdom of ages from an older world would be as bad as it is for a youth to inherit an unearned fortune.

Mexico is worried about the loss of her most efficient workers coming to the United States for our higher wages. On the other hand, Frank Munsey, able editor of many newspapers, learns that one important section of Canada, still "wet," is getting most welcome labor supplies from this country, thousands of skilled Americans going to Canada, attracted by the combination of good wages and no prohibition.

The man who makes ouija boards is building a $150,000 addition to his factory and believes he has exclusive patent rights. According to Professor Wallace, it is an old patent, ouija having been a revered institution in Thibet for two thousand years.

Dr. Wallace believes that spirits can be photographed. A sincere man once came to this office with a "spirit photograph" of Charles Dickens. There was no question as to his good faith. But it was a photograph of an old painting of Charles Dickens, not of the man himself. The spiritualist could not explain how Dickens had taken the painting along with him to the other world and made it pose for the photograph.

In the slightly altered language of Johnson: "Sir, we know that spiritualism is a humbug, and there's an end of it."

But many spiritualists are sincere men and women, including mediums, sincerity being the first element to success in all professions. Among African witch doctors the most prosperous really believe that they can bring rain or tell who bewitched the chief when he has stomach ache from overeating.

Last Word In Taxes

In all the phantasmagoria of Taxes, old, middle-aged and new that have left a trail of bleeding bank accounts from the Battery to the Bronx, and from Maine to California, one luxury has been overlooked, but it will be overlooked no longer. The luxury we refer to is whiskers—or are whiskers, as the case may be.

We have it from a well-known barber who is prominent in economic circles that a tax is to be placed on whiskers—a prohibitive tax, if possible. And the reasons sound logical.

The owner of a magnificent set of whiskers enjoys many advantages over his smooth-shaven brother. If he wears the long, flowing Bernard Shaw effect, he saves a great deal of money which he would otherwise have to spend for red flannel chest protectors.

Then, the possession of whiskers gives one an air. He is beautified above his fellow man and is more admired.

It is perhaps unnecessary to mention the saving in necktie alone. That is obvious. Probably Mohammed never had to buy a necktie in his life. There is no apple in the world so susceptible to frosts as the Adam's apple and those wearing the Horace Greeley string type of beard are free from that. Those who wear the mutton-chop or ex-Secretary Redfield type never have to worry about the high cost of ear-muffs.

While other men are waiting in barber shops and the tide of life and opportunity is flowing by them like a mighty river, these men can be out and doing. The nine years that the average man spends in the tonsorial parlor are saved to them.

They do not even have to hunt up a straw to find out which way the wind is blowing. Truly, as the barber says, while we are taxing luxuries, this one should not be overlooked.

A Wonderful Evening

Clarice rose happily from a divan in a luxuriously appointed apartment to greet Harold.

"O Harold!" she exclaimed, "I have made some of the most wonderful champagne cocktails. I will have Meadows bring them in."

Harold, in a trim, tailored dress suit, drank three of them and smacked his lips approvingly. "They are the best I have had today—at least, since 4 o'clock," he said. "And now I have a little gift for you."

She opened the little plush box and burst into exclamations of rapture. It was a beautiful necklace of matched pearls.

"A little thing I picked up at Sticany's," he said.

"It is much prettier than the one you gave me last week," she said. "The three dozen American Beauties came, too. They are wonderful."

"You will have dinner with me at Bilmonico's, of course?" said Harold, carelessly. "And the theater afterward"——

"It would be delightful, I am sure."

"We will ride both ways in a taxicab."

"How perfectly ripping."

At the restaurant they had a perfectly appointed meal, with ruced grouse and champagne. Harold tipped the waiter $5 and they went to the theater, where they occupied a box.

There was a perfect little supper after the theater. On their way home Harold handed Clarice another small plush box containing a five-karat diamond ring.

"Will you marry me, Clarice?" he whispered.

"Yes, dear; of course," she breathed.

Where did this all happen? It happened in a novel, of course.

Where else could it happen?

Vegetarian Diet

BY BRICE BELDEN, M. D.

A vegetarian diet furnishes all the necessary food elements—water, mineral salts in the desired proportion, starches, fats, proteins and vitamines.

Three great advantages are offered by a vegetarian diet. It is poor in elements giving rise to uric acid, which is an important matter in view of the prevalence of joint troubles; it makes the use of alcohol less likely, since those who use a vegetarian diet are almost never thirsty because of the amount of water contained in it; it is a relatively cheap diet.

It might also be said in this connection that vegetable foods do not excite thirst as do the condiments with which meats are often accompanied.

But a vegetable diet also offers three disadvantages. It is a non-stimulating diet; it presents too great a volume, being cumbrous for the digestive tube; it is not rich enough in proteins.

But the disadvantages are more apparent than real. The lack of stimulating substances is not a great evil, since civilised persons are only too often tempted to abuse stimulants. The bulkiness of a vegetarian diet would really hold good only if one ate solely cabbages, potatoes and similar vegetables. As a matter of fact the vegetarian diet includes cereals, dried fruits and nuts, and may be sufficiently varied to make the mean bulk not too great.

A vegetarian diet is compatible with the integrity of all functions in a fully developed life. Recent experiments made at Brussels by Jotcyko and Kipiani have shown that vegetarians can work two or three times longer than meat eaters before reaching exhaustion, and that the work of vegetarians is much more productive. The repair of fatigue is also more rapidly effected in vegetarians, a few minutes rest suffices to enable them to recuperate their energies.

Nevertheless, it is a fact that we can digest and assimilate proteins of animal origin better than we can those of vegetable origin. The moral is, eat a rationally mixed diet: A vegetable diet plus milk, with a little meat and eggs. One so fed, ought to outclass the meat eater and the strict vegetarian alike.

TALE OF OPERA STAR'S TROUBLE BRINGS RELIEF

American Friends Of Fraulein Brandt, In Want In Vienna, Come To Her Aid

OLD PUPILS SEND DRAFTS

Greatly Moved To Be Remembered By Some She Thought Had Forgotten

Vienna, March 31.—Marianne Brandt, the former grand opera star, whose letter describing the difficult living conditions in Vienna was quoted in a story in The World in January, is a happy woman today. Not only is she in possession of enough staple articles of food to meet her needs for some time to come, but she is full of delight in the knowledge of having something still more precious—the loyalty of old friends.

Fraulein Brandt says she had no idea that her letter telling of the hunger of almost all classes of people here would be published, and she was at first a little annoyed that her privations had been made known to the world, but it served to put her in touch with people whom she had not heard from for years. It was one of these, an old pupil, who hastened to send her, by food drafts on the American warehouses here, the necessaries of life which are unobtainable by so many.

The woman who was the first to play the part of Kundry in "Parsifal" and who was widely known in the United States when she sang at the Metropolitan Opera House thirty years ago is now eighty-four years old. She lives alone in an apartment on the first floor of No. 6 Koestlergasse. But neither age nor a recent accident has weakened her zeal or energy, for when the correspondent called there today she was sitting before a grand piano giving a singing lesson to a young woman pupil.

AMERICANS LOYAL FRIENDS

"The Americans are the most loyal friends in the world," she said. "Several of those whom I met many years ago have written to me regularly and cheered me with their messages, but the appearance of my name in the papers several months ago brought word from others that I supposed had forgotten all about me. One whom I had neither seen nor heard from for thirty years raised a large sum of money and sent it to me. The food packages were from an old pupil whom I had trained and started on her career.

"I cannot tell you how deeply I am touched by this loyalty."

Fraulein Brandt intimated that she was not greatly in need of money but that her sufferings were those that most Viennese share because of food and coal scarcity. She went to the bank the other day and in going through a turnstile was pushed down by the crowd onto the marble floor. Her leg was badly bruised and her head gashed. Fortunately no bones were broken and she is now able to move about.

Many other homes in Vienna have been made glad by the receipt of a food draft from America, although in many cases the sympathetic touch of personal acquaintance was lacking. But so grateful are people whose limit of endurance has almost been reached for this assistance that these gifts may be the means of starting future acquaintance and friendship.

Approximately 30,000 of these life-bearing drafts have either been received here or are on the way, and this means milk and fat for many a family that has not seen either for several years. One has only to watch the holders of drafts as they present them at the American warehouse on Parkring and observe their sallow faces to realise that such gifts are relieving real distress.

DRAFTS ARE WATCHED

Notwithstanding the fact that lack of food is general, and that therefore almost any one would be benefited by an American package, every precaution is taken to insure that the packages get into the right hands and not into the possession of unscrupulous traders. The holder of a draft must be as completely identified as if he were cashing a check for money. In addition he must sign a pledge that the food is for his own use.

This pledge, which carries the holder's address, is made in triplicate. One copy is kept by the warehouse, another by the man himself as proof that he came into possession of the food properly, and the third is given to the police.

The American feeding of undernourished children, which is an entirely separate activity from the warehouse, plan, has been going on for nearly a year and is an old story, but one may still run across incidents that stir the emotions.

The other day a visitor to a kitchen in one of the poorest districts saw an undersized, scrawny looking boy sitting beside a blue-eyed little girl feeding her rice and cocoa with a spoon. The smaller child was blinking with delight, while the boy was calm and grave but seemed very proud. He kept on feeding the baby and never once attempted to take a bite for himself.

The incident moved the visitor to ask the woman in charge of the kitchen what it meant and she said: "The boy has a card but the little girl who is his sister has not and he has brought her here with him to share his meal."

She and the visitor then urged the boy to eat something himself. He did so and in spite of his apparent indifference could not help but reveal his real hunger by eating eagerly huge spoonfuls of the food. The boy was Karl Weber, who was nine years old, but he did not look to be over six. His little sister was two. Mitzi will now get a card all for her very own and Karl will not be permitted to share the meal which his shrunken body so greatly needs for itself.
